Mission Statement

St. Anselm’s Abbey School seeks to promote the spiritual, personal and intellectual development of young men with demonstrated academic achievement. Our school, serving grades six through twelve, with its roots in the values of the Christian gospel and Catholic tradition, strives to create a community built on respect for truth, love of learning, regard for human dignity and tolerance. We pursue this goal by leading our students through a challenging and balanced program of study in the arts, sciences and theology that gives them a solid preparation for the demands of college. By living and promoting the Benedictine spirit, we strive within our school to create an atmosphere of peace, a sense of service to community and a willingness within our students to work toward a balance in mind, body and spirit.

St. Anselm’s Abbey School admits students of any race, color, national or ethnic origin to all the rights, privileges, program and activities generally accorded and made available to students at the school and the school does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, national or ethnic origin in administration of educational policies, admission policies, scholarship and loan programs, and athletic and other school-administered programs. St. Anselm’s Abbey School, Inc. is an equal opportunity employer.
Dear Parents, Alumni, Students, Faculty, and Friends of St. Anselm’s Abbey School,

In Rome, the Catholic Church ends its business year on June 29th with the Solemnity of Saints Peter and Paul. Our Abbey School ends its fiscal year on June 30th, at which time I prepare my opening letter for the Annual Report. Saint Anselm’s reflections on the Feast of Saints Peter and Paul are special insights into our faith. “Saint Peter, prince of the apostles, by the mercy shown you and the power given you, loosen my chains, heal my wounds, and lead me into the bliss of the kingdom of heaven.” And Anselm’s Prayer to St. Paul contains one of the most famous texts in Christian spirituality about the maternal aspect of God, the re-creative love of Christ referred to as the “motherhood” of the second person of the Trinity: “Christ, my mother, you gather your chickens under your wings. For by your gentleness the badly frightened are comforted, by your sweet smell the despairing are revived, your warmth gives life to the dead, your touch justifies sinners.”

This Benedictine monastery and school continue to exemplify Pope Benedict XVI’s statement that monasticism has long been “the indispensable forerunner and bearer not only of cultural continuity but above all of fundamental and religious and moral values.” The Holy Father goes on to say that monasticism acts as a “pre-political and super-political force” that brings “ever-welcome and necessary rebirths of culture and civilization.” So as we review the academic and fiscal year 2011-2012, it is my hope that our readers will be able to hear the strengths and great accomplishments of our school through the weaknesses of my words.

The most important happening this year was our successful search for the next Headmaster. Following an extensive process led by Mr. Marco Clark, President of Bishop McNamara High School and member of our Board of Trustees, and a ten-member Search Committee, Mr. William T. Crittenberger was appointed our tenth Headmaster on March 1st by the Board of Trustees. He officially took office on July 1st. We owe the Search Committee an enormous debt of gratitude for their intense work. Mr. Crittenberger succeeds Mr. Louis Silvano, who served as our first lay Headmaster for the past four years.

I want to take this opportunity to thank Mr. Silvano for his dedication and service to St. Anselm’s Abbey School. During his tenure, he formulated a much-needed five-year Strategic Plan, upheld our Benedictine identity, and maintained our high academic standards. Furthermore, Mr. Silvano oversaw the Five-Year Accreditation Review by the Middle States Association for which the school received an exemplary commendation. We wish him well in his new role as Principal of Saint Luke School in McLean, Va.

On August 24th, with 232 young scholars, the school year began by breaking the summer silence of our hallowed halls. As gifted and academically motivated young men, of all the possible choices available, once again, St. Anselm’s Abbey School is their preferred destination. After nine months of rigorous yet extraordinary times, the year ended on June 2nd with the graduation of our 67th class. This year’s college placements are again outstanding. Our 30 seniors were accepted into 141 college and universities and were offered over $3,274,000 in scholarship aid. And our mission of academic excellence remains pre-eminent as attested to by articles (May 20th and 21st) in the Washington Post that identified us as #1 in the metropolitan area and 37th in the nation based upon our rates of Advanced Placement participation.

The Alumni Office, under the direction of Mr. Lawrence Hamm, ’68, had a full schedule of well-attended events. The annual Career Day was held at the School on September 19th when nine distinguished alumni shared their knowledge and expertise with our Fifth and Sixth Form students. A very competitive Damian Crane, ’55, Memorial Pool Tournament was held on October 26th, followed on November 26th by the Thanksgiving Alumni-Varsity basketball game. The Alumni Association hosted their fourth annual All-Alumni Reunion Weekend April 27th to 29th with 175 attendees at the banquet. That evening, Mr. Matthew Nolan, ’76, was the recipient of the Abbot Alban Boultwood, OSB, Award for his decades of tireless service to the Alumni Association and the School, as well as for his longtime membership on the Board of Advisors and Board of Trustees. Needless to say, I also want to thank Mr. Avenette Cobbina, ’98, President of the Alumni Association, and all the members of the Alumni Board for the love they show for their alma mater and for their work on its behalf.

The final alumni event of the year, the 19th Annual Golf Outing, was held on June 4th with 52 loyal and eager golfers at the Glenn Dale Country Club under cool and sunny skies. After the BBQ, the Alumni Association presented a $25,000 check to the School for the Scholarship Fund. Over $10,000 came directly from the golf outing, and the rest of this money was raised through the Alumni Phonathon. Thank you, Mr. Patrick Attridge, ’74, for your 17 consecutive years of chairing this event.

Our annual Fall Scholarship Gala took place on the evening of October 29th. I want to thank once again all the parents who worked so hard to make the Gala a success, and I want to thank all those who participated in raising slightly over $180,000 for current scholarship aid. That evening, we inducted all lay faculty members, past and present, into the Hall of Honor for their service over the past 70 years.

I encourage you to mark your calendars now for our next Gala on Saturday evening, October 20th, 2012. With the theme Jazzed About the Future, we will complete our celebration of 70 years since the founding of St. Anselm’s Abbey School. That evening, our new Headmaster, Mr. William Crittenberger, will be the Guest of Honor.

The School hosted two events for Form VII Forever, our Past Parent social organization. The first one took place on November 19th when the parents enjoyed the Priory Players’ musical, Fiddler on the Roof. The second event took place on February 26th when 30-some families spanning the last 50 years attended a Lenten Mass celebrated by Fr. Michael Hall, OSB, school chaplain, then socialized at a magnificent brunch in the Commons.

As President of the School, I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the members of the Board of Trustees, and in particular our Board Chairman Mr. Stephen Kinnaird, ’80, for their dedicated service to St. Anselm’s Abbey School. This year, Mr. Thomas Borger’s and Mr. Chris Davitt’s terms expired, and I want to give special thanks to them for their labor of love. Mr. Borger will continue to serve on the Board’s Finance Committee.

Likewise, I would like to thank Mrs. Leslie Merkle, President of the Parents Association, and all the parents who served so generously over this past year on so many vital, time-consuming projects and events. We are truly blessed to have such dedicated and enthusiastic parents.

On the monastic side of things, I am happy to report that we have three new postulants who began their monastic life this past May. Please pray for them and for more vocations to our monastery. By the time you receive this Annual Report, the monastery’s renovation of the old north wing—where the Priory School began classes 70 years ago—into modern infirmary rooms for our aging monks will be well underway. This much-needed change has been possible thanks to your never-ending financial help.

I also want to take this opportunity to thank each and every one of our benefactors, donors, alumni, parents, and friends who have contributed so generously this year to St. Anselm’s Abbey School. As of June 30th, the School raised $923,762. Without your prayers and benefactions, this Benedictine miracle at 4501 South Dakota Avenue could not survive. Know that the monks continue to pray for you and your families.

Pax in Sapientia.

Fr. Peter Weigand, OSB
President

Letter from the Headmaster

As the school year concluded on June 2, we congratulated the thirty young men of the Class of 2012 and celebrated their accomplishments as they head off to an impressive array of colleges and universities. This 67th graduation ceremony also marked another important milestone as we recognized two monks who are retiring from teaching: Fr. Boniface von Nell, OSB, who taught German and Latin for 22 years, and Abbot Aidan Shea, OSB, who taught English, French, Greek, Latin, and Spanish for more than 50 years. The whole School community is deeply grateful for their faithful service and inspired by their devotion to their students. Finally, we congratulate all of our students on their many accomplishments over this past year, and we thank all our outstanding faculty for their steadfast commitment, without which none of this would be possible.

I am pleased to report that the School successfully completed its Five-Year Accreditation Review by the Middle States Association this spring. The reviewer, Dr. Dwight Wagner, stated in his conclusion that he “was very impressed by the quality of accomplishment achieved by the school due to the skill and capability of an outstanding faculty and administration. The young men who graduate from St. Anselm’s Abbey have a degree of preparation that would easily equal, and probably exceed that of most institutions.”

As I reflect upon the last four years, I feel truly blessed to have been part of the St. Anselm’s Abbey School community. I am deeply grateful to the Board of Trustees for giving me the opportunity to serve the school as its first lay Headmaster. I wish to thank our President Fr. Peter, the faculty and staff, the students and the parents for all their support and friendship. I am confident the school will thrive under Mr. Crittenberger’s leadership, and I look forward to visiting on special occasions.

Pax in Sapientia,

Louis Silvano
Headmaster

Chairman’s Report

Dear Parents and Past Parents, Faculty and Staff, Students and Alumni, and Friends of St. Anselm’s Abbey School:

St. Anselm’s has a proud tradition of wonderful Headmasters who have made their mark on our School. In 2012, we bade farewell to one such Headmaster, Louis Silvano, the first layman to occupy that post. Mr. Silvano’s contributions to the school were many. He led the development of the School’s five-year strategic plan and its successful accreditation efforts; he introduced a number of professional best practices; and he guided the students and faculty with wisdom and grace. St. Anselm’s continued to flourish academically under Mr. Silvano’s leadership, receiving the top ranking among schools surveyed in the Washington area (and indeed among independent schools nationally) in the Washington Post’s Challenge Index and producing accomplished graduates who are moving on to the nation’s leading colleges. Perhaps most notably, Mr. Silvano devoted himself to promoting the Benedictine ethos of the School, a commitment that smoothed the School’s transition to lay academic leadership. We wish Mr. Silvano well in his new position as Principal of St. Luke’s School in McLean, Va.

The Board of Trustees is pleased to welcome our new Headmaster, William Crittenberger, who assumed his post in July of this year. Mr. Crittenberger is a man of energy, character, and vision with deep academic experience and a strong affinity for the traditions of the school. He comes to us from his most recent post as Assistant Head of School for Institutional Advancement at the Stone Ridge School of the Sacred Heart in Bethesda, Maryland, after having held leadership positions at the Landon and Bullis Schools. Mr. Crittenberger has 28 years of education experience and degrees from Johns Hopkins, Yale and George Washington Universities, and has been an esteemed teacher in Math, History, and Government and Politics as well as a coach of various sports. The Board is very grateful to our Headmaster Search Committee, which was headed by Mr. Marco Clark (a Trustee of St. Anselm’s and current President and CEO of Bishop McNamara High School) and composed of alumni, past parents, faculty members, monks, academic leaders from the local Catholic and independent school communities, and former university administrators. The Committee worked diligently for many months in conducting a national search, and it carefully solicited feedback on candidates from students, faculty and parents. Mr. Crittenberger is the right leader to guide St. Anselm’s in the coming years, and we are delighted to welcome not only him but his wife Tracy and their four children – Lee (20), Willie (19), Tommy (16), and Dale (14) – to the St. Anselm’s community.

The Board took the occasion of this leadership transition to address its governance structure and to redefine the responsibilities of the President and the Headmaster. The President is appointed by the Board of Members of the monastery but reports to the Board of Trustees, and has responsibility for the institutional functions of development, alumni relations, communications, and finance. The Headmaster, who is appointed by the Board, has full executive responsibility for school operations and for all matters concerning the academic, athletic, and other programs. We are blessed to have Fr. Peter Weigand continue in the office of President and grace the school with his spirit and energy. Fr. Peter, who served on the Headmaster Search Committee, is working closely with Mr. Crittenberger and the Board to ready St. Anselm’s for the challenges and opportunities of the future.

In this year of transition, we welcomed three new members to the Board of Trustees: Leo Eskin, ’76, and two past parents, Sylvia Mahaffey and Jean Gaetjens. We also express our gratitude for two dedicated servants of St. Anselm’s who concluded their terms on the Board this year. Chris Davitt, a businessman whose family has deep ties to the Abbey and the School, brought wisdom and a strong practical sense to Board deliberations. Our second departing Trustee, Tom Borger, is unmatched in his service to St. Anselm’s. A past parent and long-serving member of school advisory boards, Mr. Borger served two terms on the Board and was its first Chairman. No person contributed more to the successful evolution of the Board of Trustees than did Mr. Borger, and as Chairman I have benefited greatly from his perceptive counsel.

St. Anselm’s is a special community, and I have always felt privileged to be part of it. I hope all of us (students, faculty and staff, monks, parents, past parents, alumni, and friends) will renew our dedication to this School and continue to help it thrive.

Sincerely,

Stephen B. Kinnaird, ’80

Abbot James, Abbot Aidan, Fr. Michael, Fr. Peter, Mr. Kinnaird, Mr. Silvano, alumni, members of the monastic community, teachers, friends, family, and members of the Class of 2012: Thank you for inviting me here today.

I have attended many graduations. Most commencement speakers give life advice. Such speeches are well-intentioned but often forgotten. Nor can I give you better advice than you have received already, from those who are here with you today.

I will tell you a story instead. The main character in the story is a man named Jeffery Tucker. From 1981 to 1987, while I was a student at St. Anselm’s, Tucker did his time in Texas prisons for possession of marijuana, forgery, and felony theft. He was supposed to be released earlier but received more prison time in 1984 for stabbing his cellmate in the head with a sharpened toothbrush. He was paroled in June 1988, the same month my younger brother Edward was graduated from the Abbey.

One month later, Tucker, aged 28, answered a newspaper ad for the sale of a pickup truck and camp trailer placed by Wilton Humphreys, aged 65. After a test drive, Tucker said he’d buy the truck, but stole it instead, shooting Humphreys three times in the chest and face and running over his legs while driving away. Humphreys’ body was found by a passing motorist. Tucker then went on a robbery spree in the stolen truck. He was caught, tried, and sentenced to death by a Texas jury. His execution by lethal injection was scheduled for 5:00 p.m. on September 11, 2001.

On September 11, 2001, you were in primary school and I was a clerk at the U.S. Supreme Court. One of my jobs was to evaluate the legal merits of applications for death penalty stays and to recommend a disposition to my judge, David Souter. You all know what happened on 9/11—Islamist terrorists destroyed the World Trade Center towers in New York City and caused death and destruction in Pennsylvania and at the Pentagon.

The Supreme Court was evacuated mid-morning before any papers had been received from Jeffery Tucker’s lawyers seeking an emergency stay of his execution. What was their argument? Let me read to you from a letter written to the Governor of Texas by the American Civil Liberties Union. It is, of course, an advocacy letter, but it is factually accurate in key details:

“Mr. Tucker came into the world in the most unfortunate of circumstances, which never improved throughout his life. A frail child at birth, by the age of 5, he had sustained a number of serious head injuries and had been molested. By the age of 8, he had been physically abused by a number of adults and older children, had suffered further head injuries, had been raped, and had been introduced to marijuana. By the time Tucker was 11, a State psychiatrist had concluded that he would never be able to remain mentally stable unless he stayed on anti-psychotic medication. Tucker’s mother, in whose custody he was at the time, chronically failed to ensure that her son take the medications prescribed. By the time of the crime, Tucker had become a mentally ill man addicted to drugs in an effort to dull the numerous traumas of his life.

“The State has ample records both of the diagnoses issued to the young Jeff Tucker and the failure of his mother to administer the medications. The State’s attorney, however, failed to turn [over] these records to Tucker’s trial attorney. As a result, the history of Tucker’s mental illness was not considered in the sentencing phase of his trial.”

All of this is very sad, but it is not a winning case on the law. The Constitution, as currently construed, does not prohibit the death penalty, except as to those who were mentally handicapped or under the age of 18 at the time of the crime. Histories of child and substance abuse are now customarily introduced in death penalty sentencing, but there is no constitutional right to such evidence, nor is there a constitutional duty for the state to turn such evidence over to a defendant’s lawyer. And, at the time of Jeffery Tucker’s sentencing, the use of such mitigation evidence was not even routine.

The reality is that if Tucker’s petition had been received and considered by the Supreme Court on 9/11, it would have been denied and he would have died shortly after 5:00 p.m. that day. But, as I have told you, the Court was evacuated before a petition was received. What happened to Tucker? A miracle of sorts. The governor of Texas unilaterally gave Tucker a 30-day reprieve, so that his lawyers had time to file a petition to the Supreme Court. It was the governor’s first stay of an execution since taking office. The governor’s name was Rick Perry.

How did Tucker react? He asked the Texas district attorney to carry out the execution as scheduled. Why? In an earlier prison interview he hinted at his reason:

“I’ve had to wake up every day for the last 13 years and look at myself in the mirror and know that I took a man’s life. The memory haunts me. I say put me on the gurney and maybe the pain will stop.”

In fact, Tucker had objected to his lawyers filing a petition with the Supreme Court on 9/11 in the first place. And, after his 30-day reprieve expired, he instructed them not to file any more appeals. His execution was rescheduled for November 14, 2001, and he died at 6:26 p.m., 11 minutes after lethal injection was started. At his execution, looking at Peggy Humphreys, the victim’s widow, Tucker said:

“To the Humphreys family, I am sorry for the pain and suffering I caused them. It was just a simple accident and if my death can bring you peace and solace, I gladly give that to you.”

And to his attorneys and family: “I know you wanted to continue my appeal, but you know my reasons. Have a happy heart knowing I leave this world in peace.”

He closed with a recitation of the Lord’s Prayer. Humphrey’s son, Jon Brad Humphreys, said “Amen” with him.

This spring I taught a seminar entitled “Terrorism, Torture and the Courts” which was anchored by the larger events of September 11, 2001. I have chosen to feature 9/11 here today because it seems to be the most important historical event in your lives to date. One of the seminar readings I assigned was a government memorandum dated November 7, 2002, almost exactly a year after Tucker was executed. It concerns authorization for use of what are called “stress positions” to harvest intelligence from detainees in the war on terror. One such stress position was standing for up to 4 hours. A handwritten notation on the memo states:

“I stand for 8-10 hours a day. Why is standing limited to 4 hours? -D.R.”

“D.R.” was then-Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld. He, like me, uses a standing desk, most likely because of back problems and because standing desks were frequently used in the old days, by great figures like Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

In preparation for today, I reviewed prior commencement speeches. Every speech from the past three years had a Latin quotation. Far be it from me to break from tradition. I took Latin for six years, two with Fr. Aidan, and, to quote Vergil, mirabile visu, I still use it today. My current research focuses on the influence of Roman law and legal institutions on American constitutionalism.

My quotation will be from the beautiful prologue of the Rule of St. Benedict. The most memorable words of it, to me, are Benedict’s invocation of metaphors in Proverbs and Psalms about turning our ears and hearts to God. Benedict’s brilliant variation combines them in the words “inclina aurem cordis tui” – incline the ear of your heart.

The full passage, translated crudely into English by me, is:

Listen, o son, to the precepts of the master, and incline the ear of your heart: embrace and fulfill the admonition of your loving father, so that you may return, by the labor of obedience, to him from whom you had receded through the sloth of disobedience.

Consider this metaphor and consider the three men in my 9/11 story. Jeff Tucker, who finally learned to listen too late in life, after his ear had been mutilated beyond recognition. A young Rick Perry who, in the chaos of a national tragedy, had the heart not to add to it by listening to a man for whom no one in the nation really cared. Don Rumsfeld, a man of great deeds, deaf on a momentous occasion to the difference between being forced into doing something out of powerlessness and humiliation, and choosing to do it in the context of powerfulness and privilege.

As a former naval intelligence officer, I have been in the position of desperately wanting to know something with serious implications for this wonderful country of ours and the safety of my brothers and sisters in arms and our loved ones. In the academic setting, I am often asked the ticking time bomb hypothetical: would you torture a terrorist to divulge the location of a ticking time bomb in Times Square? My answer: I would unholster my sidearm, shoot the terrorist in the kneecap or whatever torture the hypothetical poses, and then hand my weapon to the closest military police officer and request he or she care for the victim and arrest me for torture. For you see, the end may justify the means in act but it does not, and should not, in law, or in terms of who we are as children of God. And it is with the ear of the heart that we hear this truth.

You, members of the Class of 2012, and I, share a gift denied to Jeffery Tucker. But with this gift comes duty. You have been forged by the love of your families, teachers, and your friends, and, most relevant today, an English Benedictine education—you are heirs to an ancient and wise tradition. Do not live your life for today, do not be one who only speaks. Listen, before it is too late. Listen, with the ears of your hearts.
AUSTIN SCHOLAR AWARD

Jacob L. Wasserman, ’12

Abbot James, Fr. Peter, Mr. Silvano, Mr. Kinnaird, Mr. Lee, the monastic community, faculty families, friends, and, of course, my fellow graduates of the Class of 2012:

Let me tell you: ten years ago, I don’t think my grandparents expected to see their grandson in the Catholic Standard before his graduation.

But yet here we are. Take a second and look back at how far we’ve come to get to this point. And I don’t just mean that in a cliché way—the class of 2012 has really traveled the world during our seven years at the Abbey. From the valleys of Peru to the mountains of Appalachia, from Model U.N. Conferences in Boston to quizbowl tournaments in Atlanta, from cross-country camp in Ithaca to rafting trips down the Potomac, and even from the ruins of Roman France to the far shores of China, we’ve come a long way. Some of us may have even gone farther than we needed, like when Dr. Joseph forgot to get off the train in Avignon.

More than that, though, we’ve also matured in our time at St. Anselm’s. Seven years ago, many of us walked in the doors of the school not knowing what to expect. We had no idea what a life-changing, spiritual, and quirky experience we’d end up having. We could not imagine the quality of teaching we’d soon encounter, in fields from ethics to physics to origami. Back then, we were naïve boys stumbling through the hallways; now, we are both scholars and athletes, of a caliber well beyond the size of our school. In A Form, we were one-tracked children; as seniors, we’re complex young men. We were once scatterbrained; now, we’re organized. We were once shy; now, we’re outgoing. We were once short; now, we’re tall. Well, most of us anyways.

In many ways, our class has marked an era of change for St. Anselm’s. We were the last Middle School class to graduate to Upper School under Fr. Peter. We traveled through high school along with Mr. Silvano, our very first lay headmaster, who, like us, departs having left a positive mark on the School. We’ve had many people leave our grade and many others enrich our class with their presence. We’ve gone through the election of a new abbot and the construction of a new wing. We witnessed everything from the School’s curriculum and schedule to its leadership and technology morph right before our eyes.

As much as things have changed, though, we’ve always been the same Class of 2012. We are still the class that revived The Panther and Penny Wars. The class that restored and expanded the House system. The class that filled the gym with banners and put St. Anselm’s on the map. We’ve gone through the election of a new abbot and the construction of a new wing. We witnessed everything from the School’s curriculum and schedule to its leadership and technology morph right before our eyes.

As we all go off to college, though, let’s remember not to “begin again” too much. After all, we’re Abbey Boys for life, and we must never forget that. So, thank you to our wonderful teachers, our dedicated headmaster, our loving parents, and, of course, our ever-present monks, all of whose constant attention and care have brought us where we are today. Most of all, though, thank you to my classmates. Years from now, I’ll always have the fond memories of the countless hours we’ve spent together over the years. You only get one chance to make lifelong friends, and I’ve been fortunate enough to meet twenty-nine of the nicest, most supporting, and most dedicated high school students out there. I have no doubts we will always stay in contact, through sadness and through joy. More than anything else, St. Anselm’s is about community, and our grade exemplifies this like no other. To the Class of 2012, thank you for everything. Live the Fourth, gentlemen, and ḥayyim.
Abbot James, Abbot Aidan, Fr. Peter, Fr. Michael, Mr. Silvano, Mr. Kinnaird, Mr. Lee, all of our beloved friends and family, and, of course, my fellow graduates:

You’ve just heard where we’ve been. Jacob and I agreed to split up our remarks looking backward and looking forward. And so as I sat down to look into the future of the Class of 2012, I was again confronted by the age-old question that now faces us all anew: what exactly am I doing with my life? Where am I going? And again, I came to my usual answer: I haven’t the faintest idea, and it doesn’t matter.

It doesn’t matter, because we went to St. Anselm’s. In four more years, we’ll be sitting on lawns somewhere waiting to graduate again, but we won’t have 30 classmates. We’ll have 3,000, or more. We’ll be heading off to internships, or grad school, or even, possibly, jobs. Things will be very different, but it won’t matter. We’ll be few among many, but we’ll be the few that went to St. Anselm’s.

Thanks to our time at the Abbey, we’ll be prepared for anything. That’s what liberal education is all about. The student who survives Mr. Alspaugh, Mr. Corrigan, Dr. Wood, and Mrs. Cholis, or any of our other teachers; who completes his education here, with all its peculiarities, APs, extracurriculars, and plentiful doses of Benedictine tradition, can adapt to any role, can process any information, can basically out-think anyone he comes across. St. Anselm’s has taught us to do things other people can’t do, and we’re going to keep building on that ability. Our time here will always be the center from which the rest of our learning radiates out; a liberal education develops into the underlying apparatus by which one can judge everything in life.

The life of the Abbey Boy is a foundation sturdy enough for whichever of our future endeavors it needs to support. Any field is open to us, including those that don’t even exist yet, because we spent seven years not doing busywork or practicing the best standardized test-taking strategies, but really learning the fundamentals of what it means to be a thinking person. Such people are increasingly rare. And that’s why it doesn’t matter that there are many of us sitting on the stage today with very little idea where we might be going. What’s important is that we are going. We are educated and inquisitive. We’ll find somewhere to end up, and we’ll be successful when we get there.

We might not know where we’re headed, but we know why we’re headed. St. Anselm’s is sending us off, and we’ll see you when we get there, wherever that might be. Let’s go find out. The last seven years have been indescribable, and now we have the rest of our lives to reap the benefits. To the entire community: Thank you.
Abbot James, Fr. Peter, Fr. Michael, Mr. Silvano, Mr. Kinnaird, Mr. Lee, members of the monastic community, faculty, family, friends, and the gentlemen of the Class of 2012, thank you for all of your support and putting up with us over our years at St. Anselm’s. When I was presented with the task of writing a graduation speech, I approached it like any good Abbey Boy would: with a few minutes of contemplation followed by several days of procrastination. But recognizing the importance of this speech, I synthesized the Abbey Boy.

All of my experiences at St. Anselm’s are best represented by the quote “It is always the right time to do the right thing.” This quote is something that we can all reflect on as we move forward to our college careers. There we will need to keep a grasp on what all of us have learned through our days at the Abbey in order to be successful in our future endeavors. Doing the right thing when no one is watching has been a basis for our education, teaching us responsibility for our actions and instilling Benedictine virtues, unique to our school.

Over my time at the Abbey, I learned that life’s decisions may not always be easy for us to make, but if we stay true to these Benedictine values we will go far in our lives. Without the guidance from our teachers and monks on these Abbey grounds, we would have never learned such important aspects of life.

Over the six years I have been at St. Anselm’s, both the faculty and monks have become people who I look up to. I am no longer afraid to go up and talk to them as I once was when I first arrived here. These people have become our mentors and have taught us the essentials to operate out in the world. Throughout this time of shared experiences and learning we have grown closer as brothers and learned more about ourselves.

Though this may be in one sense an end, more importantly it is a beginning again in which we can take our Abbey virtues to college. This monastic tradition will never leave our spirits, no matter where life brings us, and we will always be drawn back to the serenity of these Abbey grounds.
Mr. Silvano, Fr. Peter, Fr. Michael, Mr. Mehigan, parents, guests, and of course Form II students, it is my distinct pleasure to be with you this afternoon.

As Mr. Mehigan said, I recently completed a degree in interdisciplinary studies. However, it was not until came back here to the Abbey that I really began to appreciate the true value of either that degree or this place. Even at this point in your time here, I bet each one of you can pinpoint one thing that makes this place special. Each one of you can probably expound on the meaning of Pax in Sapientia. In fact, I can guarantee you that if you stick out the next four years, you will hear some other alumnus standing up here doing just that during your graduation. But Pax in Sapientia is something very personal. It is difficult to explain to others. Even my wife does not understand my attachment to St. Anselm’s. So how would we go about laying out for our friends and for the world an objective argument for how St. Anselm’s is different, how it is unique, and how it is first among all schools, and not just because the Washington Post said so?

One theme that emerged in my research is that, as academic institutions have embraced interdisciplinary research projects, they have increasingly rediscovered a field of study inaugurated in the 1960s by economist, philosopher, mathematician, and sociologist Herbert Simon: the study of complex systems. Complex systems are differentiated from those that are merely complicated. A complicated thing simply has many parts. A truly complex thing, on the other hand, must have many interactions between and among those parts, so that the overall function is not easily discernable from the function of the parts. It is the old, “the whole is more than the sum of the parts” situation. Naturally, once a researcher breaks from the bounds of a particular field of study and looks for systems that are interactionally complex, such systems begin to crop up everywhere. Analysis of social organizations, mapping friends in Facebook, decisions of advertisers and consumers, global markets, healthcare delivery, and even the computer game minesweeper can be examples of complex systems.

Humans being humans, once we have found this class of interesting, almost impenetrable objects, we strive to analyze and understand them. Our initial instinct is to harness computers to make the complexity simple. We often run large, complicated calculations using computers, why not complex one’s as well? Well, here we almost inevitably encounter a problem. What a computer does in analyzing any system is to convert it into an analogous formal system. Like arithmetic, geometry, or symbolic logic, formal systems give a standard set of symbols then manipulate those symbols using set rules of manipulation until new conclusions are reached. Such an approach is incredibly powerful since any answer derived in accordance with the rules is not just true, but necessarily true and certain. But the grand dream for hyper-rational-computer-aided man came crashing down after discoveries by Austrian mathematician Kurt Gödel, and later Church and Turing. The problem is that, formal systems above a given size cannot either a) obey all those rules or b) produce all the answers we know to be true. For those of us that are not mathematicians, the implication is that, however hard we try, however big we build computers, we will never be able to just plug in a complex system and get out the optimal answer.

But wait a minute. We do this all the time. We just talked about all the types of complex systems out there. I do know the variety and type of my social interactions, as an alumnus here today, as a teacher this year, as a rugby player, and so on. We have made laws about health care delivery. So obviously, even if a computer cannot give us answers to complex systems, we do so ourselves everyday. How? What does this mean?

Well, first, as I am sure is no surprise, we rarely, perhaps never, come up with the singular, optimal solution to complex problems. No health care law will ever provide that absolute best method of organizing such a complex system. But, humans reason using a process called alternately “abductive reasoning,” “satisficing,” “inference to the best explanation,” or perhaps most pessimistically, “guessing.” All these names refer to a process of reasoning that seeks, not the certainty for a formal system, but a balance between speed and accuracy. So, while we may miss out on the singularly optimal solution, we can solve many of these complex systems very well. I may not balance my social obligations perfectly, but I do a pretty good job of showing up to work on time, playing rugby at rugby, teaching when I am expected to do so, et cetera. But, if we cannot enjoy the certainty of formal systems, how do I know what I know about these complex systems?

Well, the brilliant insight underlying all of this is that knowledge is belief. It is a special kind of belief. It has to be justified, it has to be true, but it is still belief. Knowledge is not certainty. This realization gets to the heart of Benedictine education and your time here at St. Anselm’s.
Once you realize the limitations of rational certainty, you see the necessity for belief. It is responsible for humans being good and quick reasoners, but not precise reasoners. But more importantly for your time here, and your life beyond these walls, it opens the door to faith. Faith becomes, like knowledge, just a different manifestation of belief, and, like knowledge, it can now be expanded by reason. We cannot prove a rational basis for faith as Aquinas set out to do, but since belief precedes both faith and knowledge, we can use reason to expound on a faith that already exists. This is what Anselm means when he says fides quaerens intellectum, or faith seeking understanding. We can use reason in the same manner to enrich both our understanding of the empirical world that we can see, and of our faith which we cannot. This is why Benedictines have run schools for 1,500 years. They recognize that gaining scientific knowledge in chemistry is not just mental weight lifting, a training for the mind to then apply to spiritual studies. Rather, since knowledge and faith share a common foundation in belief, scientific knowledge can build our understanding of the world and relationship to God in exactly the same way as a rational study of faith.

So what does this mean to you, rising high schoolers? Well, in some sense, you have a moral duty to study. You have an obligation to use your intelligence to understand the richness of the world to the best of your ability. And second, in order to gain that understanding, you must have the self-discipline to apply your intellect to a given problem. I know as much as anyone the joys and dangers of multitasking, playing games on the internet while you write a paper, and send texts to your friends. But, without the discipline to focus on one problem we will jump from one thought to the next without ever having the insight necessary to innovate, to break new ground in academics, business, or any field. So there are two things, then that you must do in the next four years, not because a teacher says so or because of some centuries old mottos, but because of the way the world and our brains are made. You must continue to learn in every class, because every bit of knowledge is a new perspective on the world. And you must continue to practice discipline. So as you sit in Ms. Pelosi’s five-day-long final exams or write a giant research paper for Mr. Achilles, be happy for the trouble. Not only are you gaining knowledge but also the discipline to apply it. Then and only then, do you begin to understand what this place is about. Because self-discipline in the pursuit of knowledge results in Wisdom, and there is Peace in that.

FORM II STUDENT SPEAKER

Timothy F. Pecoraro

Good afternoon Mr. Silvano, Mr. Mehigan, Fr. Peter, faculty, staff, family, friends and fellow students.

When I first heard that I had been awarded the Headmaster’s Award, I thought to myself, “Wow, this is so great.” And then when I heard about the speech I would be giving today as a result of the award, I was scared to death. But standing before all of you today is an enormous honor that I am pleased to have.

On behalf of Form II, I would like to send out special thanks to our parents for the opportunity to attend this sacred place. Our families have always been there for us, encouraging us in our studies and making sure we did our best. I would also like to thank our teachers who have constantly challenged and inspired us each and everyday.

I will never forget the first day of A Form. We were all sitting in Room 32 with Mr. Taylor and Mr. Alspaugh making us stand up one at a time to introduce ourselves. Each one of us scared to death and shy, wanting this first day at the Abbey to come to an end. But, as the years have passed, we got to know each other better and those scared and shy boys in Room 32 developed into a group of friends with an unbreakable bond. Here at St. Anselm’s, students form bonds, not only with each other but with the faculty and the monks of the Abbey. The bonds created here last a lifetime and will always remain with us no matter what path we have chosen to take for high school.

During Field Day this year, I sat on the hill watching the current A Formers enjoy the festivities of the day. It was then that I realized how far each one of us has come in the past three years. Middle School is over and now we are about to enter into high school. We have been told that the next four years will be most difficult years in our lives up to now, but I firmly believe that we are all prepared for high school. How can we not be? We’ve had Mr. Achilles’s history class taught at a high school level, math with Mr. Corrigan, who drilled various math equations through our heads, Ms. Dunne teaching us how to interpret Shakespeare, Br. Ignacio preparing us all to enter the monastery, Dr. Chernovitz’s physical science class that helped us appreciate and admire the world around us, one foreign language class along with Latin, which is indeed not a dead language, Mr. Lodico and Maestro Maican helping us to discover our inner voices, and Mr. Dean who always pushed us to our physical capacity in gym class. I know we can and will make an impact, a positive difference, not only in the St. Anselm’s community but beyond this school as well. I know this is true, because I believe that you, my friends, are the most talented group of young men that I have ever known.

I have enjoyed studying side by side in the classroom, playing with you on and off the field, and want to thank you for sharing with me the best three years of my life. But before I end, I would like to leave with you a quote from an author that we all know, Dr. Seuss: “You have brains in your head, you have feet in your shoes, you can steer yourself in any direction you choose.”

Thank you, and good luck.

THANK YOU

The remarkable growth of our Annual Fund over the last several years is a testament to the generosity and loyalty of the St. Anselm’s community. In both dollars raised and rates of participation, we reached new heights in 2011-2012. The monks, students, faculty and staff of St. Anselm’s are truly grateful to all those who have lent their support to our Benedictine mission this year.
2011-2012 Leadership Gifts

St. Anselm’s Abbey School is thankful for every donation, but we would especially like to highlight the very generous donations of those whom we list below. These individuals, corporations and foundations have chosen to provide leadership gifts that particularly inspire all of us engaged in the community that is St. Anselm’s. Those included here also appear later in this Report under the various funds and campaigns they have chosen to support at St. Anselm’s Abbey School.

Annual Fund Circles of Giving

St. Anselm’s Abbey School recognizes donors for their participation in Annual Giving and support of the School. Gifts listed are from individuals, corporations, foundations and other organizations and directed through the Annual Fund to one or more of three designations: the School’s overall budget, current-year financial aid and support of the monastic community. All Annual Fund gifts received during the past fiscal year – July 1, 2011 to June 30, 2012 – are recognized in the following sections.

Note: Gifts to named scholarships, the Fall Scholarship Gala, the Endowment and the Golf Outing are listed separately.

Dear Friends of St. Anselm’s,

You will see that for the first time there is a section of our school’s Annual Report that allows us to bring you up to date on some happenings in the monastery over the past year and also to list donors to the monastery itself.

Among the things for which we are most grateful is the presence of three new members of our monastic community, men who are still postulants as I write this but who, God willing, will soon advance to the stage of novitiate. The one who arrived first is David Lord, who for many years worked in law enforcement in Erie, Pennsylvania and was also very active in his parish there. Another is an alumnus of our school, Padraic Springuel, of the class of 1998. From here, he went to St. Michael’s College in Vermont for his undergraduate degree and then earned a doctorate in the teaching of physics at the University of Maine. Our third postulant, James Marra, hails from the town of Cohoes, New York. For some years he was active as a classical pianist as well as an adviser to development companies and business corporations, but in the years immediately prior to joining us he worked with the poor and homeless at various sites in the Washington area. It has been a joy for me and others of our professed monks to help with the training of these men in the ways of monastic life and spirituality.

As a community we are also very concerned to see to the proper care of those monks who are facing the physical hardships that inevitably come with advancing age. Three years ago those of us in final vows unanimously approved at a chapter meeting the notion of renovating our “old north wing” into a seniors wing, a project that is now well under way. Thanks to the wonderful generosity of some of our alumni and other friends of the abbey, as of this writing we have received enough gifts and commitments to proceed with the physical renovation. When completed sometime this winter, the wing will have six residential spaces, each with its own bathroom, along with a dispensary and a mailroom. Emptying that wing prior to renovation required us to find a temporary space for some of the library books and other items that had been kept there, but this work has proceeded without any major hitches. We hope that many of you will be able to attend the dedication of the renovated wing on a date that we will announce well in advance.

Some of the donors listed in this section of the Annual Report specified that their gift should go to this particular project, while the gifts of many others have been used for the numerous ongoing expenses incurred from day to day and month to month. For all of these gifts we are deeply grateful, for such generosity inspires and enables us to keep serving others in whatever ways we can.

Sincerely yours,

James A. Wiseman, OSB

Appreciation from the College Counseling Office

Each year, members of the St. Anselm’s community provide guidance and assistance in a number of different ways to our students, our families and our school. We wish to convey our sincere gratitude for every effort made on behalf of St. Anselm’s Abbey School, especially those listed below:

Ms. Kelly McCarthy
For providing a summer internship to a St. Anselm’s student.

Mr. Brieuc LeBigre
For providing a summer internship to a St. Anselm’s student.

Mrs. Laura Donnelly
For conducting financial aid workshops and providing continuing consultation and advice to families.

If you are interested in placing a hard-working St. Anselm’s student in an internship at your company or organization, please do not hesitate to contact me at hdeluca@saintanselms.org or 202-269-2375 for more information.

Hal G. DeLuca
Director of College Counseling
